Woikoski Equestrian Centre

Woikoski Hevospalvelukeskus

Woikoski Hevospalvelukeskus (Woikoski Equestrian Centre) operates on what used to be Mattila Farm. The farm has been owned by Woikoski Oy since the 1930s.

Originally an experimental cultivation farm, Mattila Farm stood as an example of farms of its time. The farm was used to test various experimental cultivation methods, including the cultivation of sugar beet. The farm developed into a village hub with mills. Many villagers picked sugar beet as their first summer job.

Over time, the farm fell into disrepair, but a major renovation project began in 2006. The project began with the lakeside farm building, where the roof was in poor condition. Owner Clas Palmberg's then-girlfriend and now wife, Sari, suggested replacing the roof, and that marked the start of the extensive project. Against all of Clas' protests, Sari had brought her horses to the stable. Clas agreed on two conditions: the renovation shouldn't cost too much or take too long. Years later, the farm is now home to a successful equestrian centre. It encompasses two stables, a year-round indoor arena, and an equine rehabilitation centre. The resort offers accommodation services, two restaurants, a range of activities, and the Woikoski Car Museum.

Sari's never-ending curiosity about equine wellbeing is behind the Equestrian Centre's operations. The point of departure for Sari was her own horses' wellbeing, and she wanted to offer the same for other people's horses, too.
